Living of the future

Hamburg housing cooperative relies on Kern 24/7 Smart Terminals

Germany as a residential location is booming and modern living is fully in line with the trend. The Hamburg housing cooperative from 1904 has adopted this trend for its housing estate in Wandsbek and integrated numerous features as standard - a Kern 24/7 Smart Terminal is also part of the new living in Hamburg.

The cooperative has completed a new residential quarter for 109 families in Hamburg's Wandsbek district. As a special additional service, a Kern 24/7 Smart Terminal was integrated into the new building project, which residents can use free of charge. After a one-time registration, package orders can be delivered directly to the terminal. Via e-mail or push message from the ParcelLock app, users are informed about an incoming package.

The new residential complex in the Eckerkoppel was a very ambitious project right from the start. It took only two years from the ground-breaking ceremony to complete the new quarter. Mainly families have found their new home here.

The standard offered is high, the usage fee comparatively low. Fitted kitchens, balconies and cellars are standard in all apartments. In addition to a fibre-optic connection, video intercom, USB sockets in all rooms, bicycle parking spaces and playgrounds, the new residential complex is equipped with a Kern terminal.

This means that parcels can be accepted 24 hours a day, even if the recipients are not at home. The delivery traffic for all residents can thus be bundled at one location. The automated, sensor-equipped parcel compartments in various sizes guarantee the safe and punctual delivery of goods. The terminals could also be expanded with additional functions.

Tino Herold of Wohnungsgenossenschaft von 1904 e.G. emphasizes: "With the Kern Smart Terminals, we can offer our members a great service that brings them great added value. We see this offer as part of the living of the future." In addition to the product itself, those responsible are above all convinced of the Kern local service, which guarantees a smooth process and all-round service.

The housing cooperative of 1904 has been committed to high-quality living ever since it was founded and is always open to innovative ideas. This can also be seen in the current project in Hamburg.
